

Editorial

Advanced Teaching and Research in English Language Studies

Introduction

This issue focused on English language studies. The topics covered in this special issue are Method of English Teaching, Technology in English Teaching, Literacy, Teaching skills (listening, speaking, reading and writing), English for Specific Purpose, English Linguistics, Systemic Functional Linguistics.

Guest editorial board

Guest Editors-in-Chief

Amrin Saragih, Universitas Negeri Medan, Indonesia

Amrin Saragih is a Professor at Faculty of Languages and Arts, Universitas Negeri Medan, Indonesia. He is now the Head of Doctoral Program in English Applied Linguistics. He earned his Master (Applied Linguistics) from University of Sydney, New South Wales, Australia in 1988 and Ph.D. (Linguistics) from La Trobe University, Victoria, Australia in 1996. His research interest includes Method of Teaching English, Discourse Analysis, Semiotics and Functional Grammar.

Anami Damnet, Kasetsart University, Thailand

Anamai Damnet is an Assistant Professor and the Dean of Faculty of Liberal Arts and Science, Kasetsart University, Thailand. He earned his Master (1997) and Ph.D. (2006) in TESOL from Victoria University, Australia. His research interest includes English Language Studies, Crosscultural Communication and Teaching English for Speakers of Other Languages.

Members

Nena P. Valdez, Universiti Teknologi Brunei, Brunei Darussalam

Sumarsih, Universitas Negeri Medan, Indonesia

Masitowarni Siregar, Universitas Negeri Medan, Indonesia

Robbie Lee Sabnani, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Kanjana Chaetrakul, Kasetsart University, Thailand

Nor Hasimah Islamil, Universiti Utara Malaysia, Malaysia

Thatsanaphan Phaisannan, Petchabury Rajabhat University, Thailand

Meisuri, Universitas Negeri Medan, Indonesia